“We’re back to the future with the largest collection of player motion data in any single game,” said Jeff Reine-Adelaide, FIFA creative director. “We’ve improved the AI and implemented things like ‘dropback’ capabilities to make this new motion capture technology not only possible, but integral to our game. And as we’ve always done with FIFA, we’ve made it more authentic.” At the heart of HyperMotion Technology is an algorithm that brings players’ individual movement behaviours to life. They will now go through their on-ball actions and off-ball movement in motion – for example: tracking and reacting to the movement of opponents, anticipating each other’s actions, and even reading through long balls. When the ball comes out, players will act appropriately – running to make the most out of a dangerous opportunity, or dropping deeper into the box to support a midfield counterattack. The ball speeds too can be customized to adjust for current gameplay demands. As with previous installments, individual player attributes are authentic and data-driven. They are developed based on player-to-player comparisons in a data-driven Virtual Proteome, with all the player attributes, team-player attributes and team roles brought to life by the game’s physics engine. For example, when players are closely matched, their dribbling and acceleration abilities come to life on the pitch. And as the number of players on the pitch increases or decreases, so do the workloads on the ball carrier’s body, resulting in different levels of fatigue for the players. FIFA 22 begins with the introduction of new fan experiences that connect with players and fans. FIFA Ultimate Team, Matchday Mobile, FIFA Ultimate Team TV and the FIFA Ultimate Team App for iOS and Android have been expanded to connect with new players and in-game events. For the first time, this global football game enables fans to select their favorite player to appear in a new alternate-universe fantasy team. For the first time, the Global Series Champions league will be broadcast for every participating country – seen in over 170 territories, making it the most commercially successful global league of its kind. In addition, all Global Series games will be available to be broadcast in more countries than ever before. The official broadcaster will be Sky Sports in the UK and Portugal, Televisa Deportes in Mexico, Fox Sports in Latin America, Euros

Features Key:

- FIFA ‘22 introduces a brand-new motion-capture animation system called “HyperMotion Technology,” a unique tool powered by EA SPORTS FIFA and our expert motion-capture team. Within the game this data can be used to augment human player performances, create a more responsive and realistic experience for players, as well as for creating a wide variety of new FIFA Ultimate Team tactics.
- “Rule of the Game” creates far more forward-thinking, attacking football on the pitch. Revitalised offensive actions are back for an all-new real-time drop-zone marking system, more variable through-balls and quick shots, and celebratory DMs.
- Speed of play is up thanks to improvements in the ball physics and AI which are the result of combining more accurate player and ball movement.
- Player tactics and style of play are a huge part of each team’s identity, so players have more freedom to play their natural game. A new ‘Builders League’ works by modelling player and club personality as well as their playing style. Your characters are now player archetypes, not just numbers. Now they are more fun to play as because they know how they’ll behave at any moment, even if that moment never comes. Every minor movement and off-ball decision you make has impact on how your team performs.
- FIFA ‘22 introduces 5-on-5 gameplay. From teams who’ll jostle for position to incredible displays of strength, creativity and skill. This mode introduces tactical planning to matchmaking, requiring players to use the ball, opponents and style of play to create new and exciting ways to dominate. Players can be calm in possession or show off their skills and talents in 3-vs.-3 action. They are more involved in leading and controlling their team – making decisions on the pitch.
- Three new action-based modes: Road to Glory, Legends, and Showcase.
- Updated animations, lighting, weather and fan noises.
- Select and Training Mode now includes pre-match and post-match player and team customisation.
- Player and team badges now appear in the new club and player profile pages, and in the news feed.
- Video Tutorials throughout game.
- 5-on-5 Team of the Year
